Excerpt: . . . they should put aside their religious duties as of secondary importance, and by so doing, of course, injure their spiritual life. So that religion may have also a prominent aspect, the Hostel girls who graduate are required at home to pass a religious examination, and if they pass it they receive a certificate from the Bishop. It was not considered right that they should graduate in secular subjects only, especially those girls who are qualifying as future teachers in the Mission schools. What do these girls do with their lives when they leave the Hostel The greater number will, of course, marry and others will become teachers in the Mission schools. More recently one has desired to attend lectures at the hospital preparatory to beginning her training as a nurse. Time alone can show what other developments await the Korean girl. One thing is...
