The Correspondence of Erasmus: Letters 1535-1657 (1525)

By Desiderius Erasmus, Charles G. Nauert, Alexander Dalzell

University of Toronto Press. Hardback. Book Condition: new. BRAND NEW, The Correspondence of Erasmus: Letters 1535-1657 (1525), Desiderius Erasmus, Charles G. Nauert, Alexander Dalzell, The Peasant's War in Germany and his own ill-health combined to keep Erasmus confined to the city of Basel during 1525, but he was still able to maintain an active correspondence spanning all of Europe. In the preceding year, he had published De libero arbitrio/Freedom of the Will, his first open attack on the teachings of Martin Luther. Despite this public defence of Catholic doctrine, Erasmus was continually forced in his correspondence to reply to open or veiled attacks by Catholic critics. Erasmus directly addressed one of his critics, Noël Beaudouin, of the Paris theological faculty, in the spring of 1525. Beaudouin was preparing analyses of Erasmus' publications that would eventually form the basis for a formal condemnation. Erasmus' correspondence with Beaudouin, intended to head off such a condemnation, continued past 1525 and became increasingly hostile in tone. That same year, Erasmus also followed up reports that an influential Italian humanist, Alberto Pio, Prince of Carpi, was circulating at the papal curia a manuscript accusing Erasmus of being the major source of Luther's errors. Again, he...
